The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Japan patent publication 2001-072764 (JP-'764) in view of Japan patent publication 2001-354542 (JP-'542).

JP-'764 teaches cross-linked polyglutamic acid in cosmetics which has excellent stability (abstract). A particle size of 10 nm-500 um is specified (paragraph 18). 0.01-30% polymer is specified (paragraph 50). An oil vehicle is disclosed (paragraph 51).

JP-'542 teaches polyglutamic acid from Bacillus subtilis with molecular weights of millions or more (paragraph 10). Crosslinking with gamma irradiation is specified (paragraph 15).

It would have been obvious to make a composition comprising an oil and a cross-linked polyglutamic acid particulate to achieve the beneficial effect of stability in view of JP-'764. As to the claimed particle size range, a range encompassing that claimed is disclosed. An optimum suitable range may be obtained by routine experimentation, absent a showing of unexpected results. In re Boesch 205 USPQ 215 (CCPA 1980).

It would have further been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to use the polyglutamic acid of JP '542 in the composition of JP-'764 to obtain the beneficial effect of a high molecular weight polymer. As to the claimed crosslinking by irradiation, JP '542 teaches such.

On page 2 fourth paragraph and page 3 last paragraph of their response filed 6/7/07, applicants argue on that JP-'764 does not teach cross-linking. However, as noted in the rejection supra, the reference does so teach. Applicants argue that JP-'542 doesn't teach he claimed particle size nor an oiliness agent. However, JP-'764 teaches such limitations. That is, applicants attempt to argue the references separately, rather than as an obvious combination. Applicants argue that no motivation to combine is provided. However, the desired beneficial effect from the addition of the polyglutamic acid of JP-'542 from it's high molecular weight (such as increasing viscosity) is disclosed as such motivation. Applicants also argue that the declaration filed 11/16/06 demonstrates the unexpected result of oil dispersion with polyglutamic acid crosslinked by irradiation. However, JP-'562 also teach such a polymer, as recited above. Applicants' motivation to invent need not be the same as the motivation to combine. In re Dillon (16 USPQ2d 1897 (Fed. Cir. 1990).

No claims allowed.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
